

"I wish the June L. Mazer Lesbian Collection had been around while I was writing Surpassing the Love of Men in the 1970s. I'm grateful that it was around when I wrote Odd Girls and Twilight Lovers. It was indispensable to the production of that book."

LILLIAN FADERMAN

Author

"As I meet more and more young women who have no notion of their history and heritage, I realize how valuable are these storehouses of information. Let us not be lost to the future."

VALERIE TAYLOR

Author

"I'm so glad the Mazer Collection exists. It is a treasure for the Los Angeles lesbian community."

Imagine yourself in a room surrounded by almost a century of lesbian artwork, records, manuscripts, newspapers, books, magazines, games, organizational papers, tapes, photographs, letters, clothing, scrapbooks, and flyers; sharing with other lesbians the excitement of rediscovering the lives and struggles of the women who have come before us; perhaps even catching glimpses of pieces of your own past.

You have just imagined yourself at the
JUNE L. MAZER LESBIAN COLLECTION

The June L. Mazer Lesbian Collection is the only archive in the West dedicated exclusively to preserving lesbian history.

We are committed to seeking out and including materials by or about lesbians of all backgrounds and experiences, especially those who are not usually seen or heard.

We are committed to keeping the Collection open and available to every woman, without credentials or fee.

Our goal is to provide maximum accessibility of the materials while protecting the privacy of any donor, if she so desires.

The June L. Mazer Lesbian Collection was originally founded in Oakland, California in 1981 as the West Coast Lesbian Collections.

In 1987 it moved to Southern California and was renamed after June L. Mazer, a community activist who had been a long-time supporter of the archives.

Besides preserving and providing access to its numerous and varied materials, the Collection seeks to keep the community aware of our history through speaking engagements, publication of a newsletter and Web page, special programs, and off-site exhibits.
